

Public Health England Update

A number of our academies undertook international visits during half-term. A small number of these involved skiing in the Italian Alps.

On 25 February 2020, Public Health England updated their advice and guidance with regards to travelers to north Italy. The advice related to very specific towns currently under containment measures. These towns are not connected to skiing locations. The guidance from Public Health England and the Department for Education advises that additional measures are not indicated at this time for ski trips to the Alps, but that if travelers developed symptoms, they should self-isolate and call NHS 111.

We will continue to monitor the advice from Public Health England, the Foreign Office and the Department for Education on how schools should respond and will provide any updates in light of this.
